HORO LAMP COLLECTION
— PIERRE GONALONS
FOR HORO

Taking its cues from vintage style, Horo by Pierre Gonalons for Italian brand Masiero is a striking new lighting collection featuring glass discs and brushed brass. The design took the depiction of the sun as a circle and related icons like the sun god Ra as its starting point. The overall design is sleek and modern, while the finishes feel more vintage. Despite the very slim profile, Horo has a remarkably 3D quality. Illuminated more brightly at the edges, the discs can appear almost globe-like. The double light sources give it the unique look of a diffused glow as well as a soft directed light. "The glass itself is textured with a diamond pattern. This gives it a vintage flavour that I like so much," says Pierre.

► HARDY COLLECTION
- DAVID IRWIN FOR ANOTHER COUNTRY

Furniture brand Another Country uses sustainably sourced timber and all-natural fibres for its products, whose aesthetic draws from the minimalism and functionality of the Shaker style as well as Scandinavian and Japanese design. David Irwin's Hardy Collection references two design typologies of the 19th century - Thomas Hardy's birth century. "I have kept one eye on the past and one in the present, utilising time-honoured Windsor chair making techniques to create a range that has a vague element of nostalgia but still retains a contemporary aesthetic and relevance for today's environments," says David.
